

Bitterroot

- Lewis and Clark were the first Europeans to discover the Bitterroot. They found it in a valley in western Montana.
- The native people of Montana ate the root of the plant (usually boiled). It was a valuable trading commodity for them.
- it was made the state flower of Montana in 1895.