

When a manatee has spent a long period of time in fresh water, algae often begins to grow on its back. Although it might seem uncomfortable, the manatee doesn't mind the algae covering its body. It acts like a sunscreen!