

"When we don't receive enough water from natural sources like rain, snow-melt, and springs, we may fall into a climate condition known as a drought."