

The sandy, speckled appearance of the Speckled Rattlesnake (Crotalus mitchelli) affords it good camouflage in the deserts where it is found. One of a number of rattlesnakes found in the West, it eats squirrels, lizards, mice, rats and birds.