

Willow Ptarmigan

- The Willow Ptarmigan is pure white during the winter to blend in with the polar snow and ice. During summer, the body feathers are brown though the wings remain white.
- The female lays 6 to 10 yellow eggs with dark brown to red splotches.
- The Willow Ptarmigan was adopted as Alaska's state bird in 1955.