

Dating from the Early Jurassic Period, Cryolophosaurus was the first meat-eating dinosaur discovered in Antarctica. Scientists believe it used the strange, comb-like extension over its eyes to attract a mate.