

U.S. AIR FORCE

The U.S. Air Force has become the world's leading aerospace power. The primary mission of the Air Force is to fly planes, helicopters, and satellites. Its mission is to defend the nation through the control and management of air and space. Although clearly tasked with flying missions, most personnel work on the ground in several construction, support, and technical roles.

