

15. Iowa, ca. 1835. Originally a branch of the Woodlands Winnebago tribe, the Iowa maintained several eastern elements in their clothing. German silver crowns, red-dyed "roach" headdresses tied to their hair, and front-seamed leggings are some examples. The light pad saddle, with or without stirrups, was common to much of the Plains.