

GEORGE WASHINGTON CROSSING THE DELAWARE RIVER, DECEMBER 25, 1776

The boats were loaded by Colonel Henry Knox, whose artillery was singularly efficient at Trenton the next day. He was elected brigadier general of Artillery by Congress the day after. John Glover's able Marbleheaders ferried the boats across on that bitter night, against the powerful current and floating masses of ice.