

RaisingOurKids.com

George Washington was elected the first President of the United States in 1789. The first site of the new government was New York City. Later it was moved to Washington, D.C.