

President Martin Van Buren held office during the Panic of 1837, the first great depression in the United States. He hoped for a compromise on the slavery issue, but was an ardent supporter of Abraham Lincoln when war broke out.