

At one time there were less than 30,000 Wild Turkeys in the whole world. Thanks to sound game management they have not only been brought back from possible extinction but they are now at record high numbers throughout North America. Only the male turkeys “gobble”, the gobble is a seasonal call used only in the spring and fall.

