

Jean Lafitte made his headquarters in New Orleans, and was called "King of the Buccaneers." He and his men were pardoned for their piracy because of their help in the War of 1812.