

Sedna is the Inuit goddess of the sea. According to Inuit mythology, Sedna's fingers were cut off and fell into the ocean where each was transformed into a different sea creature - this is how walrus, seals and whales were created. Sedna decides how many of these sea animals are available for the Inuit hunters.