

Sailors during the time of Columbus saw West Indian natives using "hamacas," sleeping nets. The sailors then made their own "hamacas" as they were much more comfortable than the hard decks.