

U.S. NAVY

The Navy began during the Revolutionary War as an arm of two individual colonies, but quickly became the Continental Navy. In the 1790's, the ships that were launched were the predecessor of today's Coast Guard, and primarily for merchant guard. The modern Navy is an exclusive force that works with other branches and extends good determination.

