

Farm wives' and daughters' chores include feeding the chickens. In 1880 Catherine Firestone cared for 75 chickens, which produced some 200 dozen eggs per year. She earned "pin money" by selling the eggs not consumed by the family for cash or credit at a general store in town.